Definition of Apprenticeship

The definition of an apprenticeship as set forth by the Department of Labor is as follows:

Apprenticeships combine paid on-the-job training with classroom instruction to prepare workers highly-skilled careers. Workers benefit from apprenticeships by receiving a skills-based education that prepares them for good-paying jobs. Apprenticeship programs help employers recruit and retain a highly-skilled workforce.

Student Eligibility– Apprenticeship for Credit

In order to receive academic credit for an apprenticeship, the student must meet the following requirements:

- Minimum 3.0 GPA in the Automotive Restoration AA degree
- Unit Requirements:

Definition of Internship for Credit

The definition of an internship as set forth by the Department of Labor is as follows:

An individual is an “employee,” and must be paid, if his or her activities benefit the company more than they benefit him or her. An individual is an “intern,” who may or may not be paid, if his or her activities benefit him or her more than they benefit the company.

To comply with the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), students must either be paid a wage or receive college credit for participation in an internship. It is very important that you determine, early in the application process, whether academic credit is required. If academic credit is required and you are not able to obtain credit, most likely the employer will not take you on as an intern.

An internship for credit should be designed to meet the learning goals of the student. It should have pre-set goals outlined by the employer and agreed upon between the employer and student to ensure all expectations are met.
